

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age has increased by 1.2 billion, from 1.1 billion in 1980 to 2.3 billion in 1999. The number of people aged 15 years and over has increased by 1.1 billion, from 2.5 billion in 1980 to 3.6 billion in 1999.

There are a number of reasons why the world population is growing so rapidly. One of the main reasons is that the number of children born to each woman has increased. In 1980, the average woman in the world had 2.5 children. In 1999, the average woman had 2.8 children.

Another reason why the world population is growing so rapidly is that the number of people who are surviving to old age has increased. In 1980, the average person in the world lived for 55 years. In 1999, the average person lived for 65 years.

There are a number of reasons why the number of people who are surviving to old age has increased. One of the main reasons is that the number of people who are dying from disease and violence has decreased. In 1980, the average person in the world died from disease and violence at the age of 55. In 1999, the average person died from disease and violence at the age of 65.

Another reason why the number of people who are surviving to old age has increased is that the number of people who are living in poverty has decreased. In 1980, the average person in the world lived in poverty. In 1999, the average person lived in poverty.

There are a number of reasons why the number of people who are living in poverty has decreased. One of the main reasons is that the number of people who are working has increased. In 1980, the average person in the world worked for 10 years. In 1999, the average person worked for 20 years.

Another reason why the number of people who are living in poverty has decreased is that the number of people who are educated has increased. In 1980, the average person in the world had 5 years of education. In 1999, the average person had 10 years of education.

There are a number of reasons why the number of people who are educated has increased. One of the main reasons is that the number of people who are attending school has increased. In 1980, the average person in the world attended school for 5 years. In 1999, the average person attended school for 10 years.

Another reason why the number of people who are educated has increased is that the number of people who are working in the service sector has increased. In 1980, the average person in the world worked in the service sector for 5 years. In 1999, the average person worked in the service sector for 10 years.

There are a number of reasons why the number of people who are working in the service sector has increased. One of the main reasons is that the number of people who are working in the private sector has increased. In 1980, the average person in the world worked in the private sector for 5 years. In 1999, the average person worked in the private sector for 10 years.

Another reason why the number of people who are working in the service sector has increased is that the number of people who are working in the public sector has increased. In 1980, the average person in the world worked in the public sector for 5 years. In 1999, the average person worked in the public sector for 10 years.